

Zareena Meyn, who previously worked in the private sector, started her career at mRelief after volunteering to restore the voting rights of people in jail and those impacted by the criminal justice system, during which she witnessed the need for a stronger social infrastructure. She is now the executive director of the nonprofit mRelief and resides in Chicago.