

Ashley Stanley founded Lovin' Spoonfuls in 2010. Since that time, Spoonfuls has brought more than 23 million pounds of fresh, healthy food into the social service stream. She has created unparalleled awareness for food rescue with dedication to addressing hunger relief, climate change, and health equity. In 2011, the Boston Business Journal named her an 'Emerging Leader.' In 2012, Lovin' Spoonfuls was a two-time winner of the Mass Challenge competition. In 2013, Ashley was selected as one of the BBJ's '40 under 40' and served as a fellow at The Nantucket Project. In 2014, Ashley was recognized by The Boston Globe as a 'Game Changer' and in Boston Magazine's 'Power of Ideas.' She is an Oxfam International Sisters of the Planet Ambassador, a member of TEDWomen, and a TEDx community speaker. She's been featured on NPR and written for The Huffington Post.
